OLMSTEAD.

Many of the Press readers will be glad to hear that Charles A. Beardsley, assistant city attorney of Oakland has been selected by the city council to represent the city on the Hetch Hetchy Board which will appear before the secretary of the interior November 25. Mr. Beardsley is well known here, having been the first graduate of the Campbell Union High School eleven years ago. Since that time he has lived in Oakland and has risen to the office of assistant attorney.

A pleasing entertainment was given at the Methodist church Tuesday evening, by the Pacific Coast Trio. Warren French, baritone, sang several solos accompanied by Mrs. Earl Towner, at the piano. Miss Maude Hawley, who is a dramatic reader, very popular in Campbell circles, gave a number of comic readings. Mrs. Towner delighted the audience with several piano selections. All were enthusiastically encored and graciously responded to the calls.

Plans are being made by the Country Woman's Club for an interesting as well as instructive entertainment to be given in the near future. At this entertainment, Mrs. Jas. Hazlett, dramatic reader and impersonator of San Francisco, will give a rendition of the Book of Job, with impersonations of principal characters in costume. Watch for the date as this will be a rare treat.

At the Farmers' Union Convention in San Jose Tuesday, of the state officers elected, L. Woodard of Campbell was chosen chairman of the state legislative committee, and F. M. Righter of Campbell, member of the State Executive Committee. Farmers in the Santa Clara valley have been very active on this organization plan, and at Morgan Hill and Campbell the progress has been uncommonly marked. "Enthusiasm in this work is on the increase," said one of the members, "and you may look for big things in this organization in the future".

Campbellites Won

The superiority of the local high school basket ball team over that of Los Gatos was thoroughly demonstrated at the local courts yesterday afternoon, the game resulting in 16 to 8 points in favor of the Campbellites. The game was a most interesting one from the beginning as many near throws were made only to roll about the basket while the enthusiastic on-lookers held their breath.

Because of a lack of luck (or was it something else?) the Meows lost many close tries in the first half which resulted in a score of 8 to 3 for our side. In the second half many tries were lost by both teams. Of the locals "Bob" Kennedy was the big "B" and both his offensive and defensive playing was great. "Susie" Righter and Her-r-r-man Freyschlag, forwards, did some good work at difficult angles. Guards, Stepka, Vollman, and Mitchell deserve great credit for the way they kept the opposing forwards under their wings. No wonder Gatos didn't score more.

The great influence of the fair rooters on the players can not be over-estimated, and much credit is also due them for attending the games and cheering their schoolmates to victory.

Musical and Literary Entertainment

A musical and literary entertainment will be given at the new hall in Moreland district on Payne avenue Friday evening, November 22, by the ladies of the community. Mrs. Warren Bickmore, popular dramatic reader of San Jose will render several of the numbers and the remainder of the program will be given by local talent.

After the program a social dance will be enjoyed by the young folks. Candy and punch will be sold during the evening. A general admission of twenty-five cents will be charged and an interesting time is assured.

High School Notes

The Home and School Club will meet at three o'clock Nov. 19th, at the Grammar School. Mrs. A. L. Whitman of San Jose will address the club on the "Value of Healthful Recreation for School Children.

As a result of the inter-class debate recently the Senior class was entertained by the Junior class at a dinner Friday evening at the High School building. The hall and tables were tastily decorated with bright colored autumn leaves. Peanuts were used for place cards in an original way. You all know "Peanuts" she was there.

John Wood and Florence Brown composed the winning team of the class. Miss Chamberlin and Prof. D. H. Cramer chaperoned the party, the latter in his right place as toastmaster. Juliet Billiou responded to the toast "Household Economy"; Florence Brown, "Her Name"; Miss Chamberlin, "Debating"; Dan Yaeger, "How to Be a "Butler;" and John Wood, "Debating." The rest of the evening was passed in pleasant rivalry of chosen sides. This was one of the social events of the school term and will be followed by others.

Friday afternoon the local High School basket ball team played the San Jose Normal team to a stand still on the local court by a score of 23 to 19 in favor of the normalites. This was practically a victory for the locals who stayed in the game throughout while many fresh players were substituted by the Normals. Prof. Cramer is much pleased with the material and interest that is being developed in the school in the game.

State Text Books Are Worth $500,000

SACRAMENTO.—Five hundred thousand dollars is the approximate value of State text books now in use by children of the elementary schools of California, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Hyatt has stated. Data showing these figures have been gathered for the purpose of showing how much money it will require to supply the public schools with free text books for the pupils under the amendment to the constitution just adopted. It is thought that the law wil provide that these books now in the possession of the children and being used by them will continue to be used emporarily.

Congregational Church

Next Sunday, Nov. 17 the Congregational church will join with thousands of churches of all denominations throughout the U. S. in observing "Home Mission Week." The sermon in the morning will be illustrated by 12 graphic charts sent out by the National Interdenominational committee. This committee is made up of prominent men from the leading Protestant churches of the land, and the charts compiled from government statistics; some of the charts of especial value and interest. Although this is special Home Mission day, no special offering will be taken. The Pastor will tell a frontier home missionary story to the Boys and Girls. All are cordially invited.

C. E. at 6:30: Leader, Cynthia Bersinger, topic, "Some Current Mistakes." Theme for the evening. "Power of Quiet Things." If you have no other church home, come and worship with us you will find our meetings Bright, Brief, and Brotherly.

GEO. E. ATKINSON, Pastor.

H. Schnackenberg and son have struck water in the well they have been digging.

Miss Emma Schnackenberg of Saratoga will visit her brother H. Schnackenberg of Budd Avenue.

The Campbell Methodist Male Quartette will render a fine selection at the M. E. Church Sunday evening.

A two room cottage, furnished for light housekeeping for rent. Enquire of Mrs. M. J. Wilson, Campbell Avenue Campbell.—Adv.

The Surprise at the M. E. Sunday School on Nov. 17 will be a relic from Andersonville Prison and will be shown by a man who was in prison for many weeks. Come out at 9:50 sharp and learn about this great war prison.

Peculiarity of Sea Otter Fur.

"This collar," said a furrier, "is sea otter skin, the costliest fur known. Silver fox, beside sea otter, is cheap. Where you would pay $1,000 for a silver fox skin you'd pay $2,000 for a sea otter. It is only the Russians, the world's greatest fur lovers, who go in for this most precious of all furs. They use it exclusively for coat collars. Why? For a strange reason, an almost incredible reason. Sea otter is the only fur on which the breath won't freeze."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Learned Russian Baby.

William Lyon Phelps tells this story about Robert Louis Stevenson as illustrating the cosmopolitanism of Russian character, which Professor Phelps says is unaccountable in a measure for the international effect and influence of Russian novels. Stevenson, writing from Mentone to his mother, Jan. 7, 1874, said: "We have two little Russian girls, with the youngest of whom, a little polyglot button of a three-year-old, I had the most laughable little scene at lunch today. She said something in Italian which made everybody laugh very much. After some examination she announced emphatically to the whole table in German that I was a madchen. This hasty conclusion as to my sex she was led afterward to revise, but her new opinion was announced in a language quite unknown to me and probably Russian. To complete the scroll of her accomplishments she said goodby to me in very commendable English." Three days later Stevenson added: "The little Russian kid is only two and a half. She speaks six languages."

"A Right and Lawful Rood."

An example of the old rough and ready methods of arriving at a measurement is the Elizabethan way of getting the "feet." Falentin Leigh, who wrote on surveying, records that after service on Sunday sixteen men were stopped at the church door, just as they happened to come out, and drawn up in line, left foot to left foot. The length thus obtained was taken as "a right and lawful rood to measure and survey the land with," and a sixteenth part of it as "a right and lawful foot." Although big and little men were thus roughly averaged against each other, the results naturally varied to some extent. Hence it is, as Shaw Sparrow notes in treating of this "rood" as the architectural "bay" which gives us the "bay window," that a bay is sometimes found to be rather less than sixteen feet of twelve inches.—London Chronicle.

The Shepherd and His Flock.

A certain good bishop was in Italy for his health, and while walking in the country one day he met a small girl who was tending some pigs. The animals were giving her a great deal of trouble, and the good bishop offered to stay and watch the ones that were grunting and rooting in a ditch while the little shepherdess went to catch two runaways that had strayed from the fold. When she came back the reverend gentleman stroked the unkempt curly head of the child and asked her how much she earned by her hard work and was told that she received 4 soldi a day.

"Do you know," said he, "that I, too, am a shepherd? But I earn much more than you."

"Ah yes," answered the little peasant, "but no doubt you tend many more pigs than I do."

The Congregational Guild held a very successful social tea at the home of Mrs. W. C. Cutting on Johnson Avenue yesterday. Arrangements were made for the annual Dollar Social and Supper to take place in the parlors of the church Friday, Nov. 22nd.

NOGI'S DEATH A DUTY

NOT ACT OF SACRIFICE, AS THE WEST REGARDS IT.

Neither Was It a Rebuke to Changed Conditions, as Has Been Implied —Deed Will Long Be Remembered in Japan.

Life in Japan is much more a state of mind than in the west, where materialism governs and sentiment does not go much beyond the first verse of a song. So when Gen. Count Nogi chose to escort his emperor to the shades, it called forth a mixed admiration, with the practical thought that great men are of more value alive than dead. It would be untrue to say this view has no standing in Japan. It has. But beyond and behind it is an idea of duty that cannot be matched in the west. It is truly the scriptural precept that no higher sacrifice can be made than to lay down one's life. This has nothing to do with the heroism of the moment that acts quickly in moments of peril with us. There is less of that in Japan. It is instead the deliberately calculated sacrifice, rare on this side of the earth, and in which the Japanese finds the greatest solace for his pride. Pride rules Japan. The Samurai and their lords came down to the people; the people did not go up when the great change came with the era just ended by Mutsuhito's death. So pride leavened the mass and its influence prevails as much as when the two-sword men forced manners by menace upon the common herd.

To explain that General Nogi killed himself as a rebuke to changed conditions does not seem correct. Pride impelled him. He would not linger beyond the era to which he gave glory and through which he gained fame. Better to depart in splendor and in great company than to linger only to be pointed at!

To say a member of the military caste in Japan should kill himself as a rebuke to modern ways of wealth-getting is rather absurd. The great generals drew regular percentages upon supplies sent to their command. Gen. Prince Yamagata, first of the elder statesmen, amassed a fine fortune from this source during the war with Russia, and Gen. Prince Katsura had his share. There was no shame or secrecy about their transactions. It was part of the system of rewards.

But when next summer and other summers come and the feast of the dead is celebrated along the shores of the beautiful Lake Biwa, near Kyoto and its imperial tomb, the peasants will remember the emperor and his escort when at dusk the sails of the little lantern-lit boats are set to bear the souls of the dead back to their uncharted shore, and the people will whisper to each other the story of the general who would not let his commander depart alone.—By the Author of "Surface Japan."

Protest Reasonable.

Wash Johnson had just made a business visit to Fifth street, where he accumulated a very fine rubberized raincoat which, according to a lurid sign over the door, had been miraculously rescued from the flames by the brave firemen fighting the fire that recently destroyed one of the best known raincoat factories in New York. It didn't even look like rain, but Wash thought he might as well wear it to get acquainted with it.

He grabbed a Tenth street car for home and took the narrow strip of seat by the bulky form of a brother who was as black as waterproof ink.

Now the car stopped at a certain corner just as a negro church was letting out. A file of worshipers streamed into the car and each worshiper brushed against Wash's raincoat as he obeyed the conductor's strident request to "step up in the front of the car, please." Wash stood their brushing in silence for awhile. Then his hot southern blood got the better of him.

"Heah, heah!" he called querously, "I just paid a doliah and six bits fo' dis coat, and you all is go'n' a wear it out befo' I can get it home!"—Kansas City Times.

Women Bankrupts.

Women bankrupts were less numerous than in 1910, the figure being 399, against 495. The woman grocer was the least successful among the tradesmen of the other sex, taking the number of failures as the criterion; the woman milliner and dressmaker next, then the woman draper and haberdasher, and fourth the woman lodging house keeper. Married women were slightly in the majority of the failures (161) and single women greatly in the minority (81). There were 157 widows. The woman bankrupt entered into many fields. Among others one notes in the list of the year eleven bakers, four butchers, seven farmers, five fishmongers, four nurses, two photographers, eight restaurant keepers, five schoolmistresses, six tabacconists, two gardeners, nine toy dealers, six stationers and three undertakers.—London Board of Trade Report.

Missionary Choice.

She—Did they offer you any choice at the missionary bureau as to where you should be sent?

He—Yes, and I told them I'd prefer to go somewhere where the natives were vegetarians.

CAP and BELLS

AMPLE REWARD FOR COOKING

Woman in Seattle Receives a Severe Jolt When Seeking Token of Her Efforts to Please.

The cook for a well known Seattle family left, and no other could be obtained, so the lady of the house did the cooking herself, with such satisfactory results that, after a month, her husband gave her a beautiful set of sables as a token of his appreciation of the good dinners he had enjoyed.

Of course the neighbors soon heard of this, and when the cook left in another equally well known family the lady of that house said to her husband:

"Well, the cook has gone and I'm not going to bother to get another. I'm going to do the cooking myself, deary. You heard what Mr. So-and-So gave his wife when she did the cooking?"

And, putting her arms round his neck, she cooed: "What shall I get for my cooking?"

"Woman," said her husband, pushing her away, "you will get a long black veil!'

Too Quick.

"How about your idea of introducing parliamentary rules in your debates with your wife?"

"Given it up. She was too quick at it."

"How so?"

"In the very first debate we had about buying a handsome handwork centerpiece, she moved at once to lay the subject on the table."

Futile.

Reynard looked at the cunningly baited trap with a contemptuous smile.

"It might tempt a muskrat," he said, "but my fur is too scarce and valuable to be caught by a thing like that."

You can't fool a wise old fox even a part of the time.

Helping the People.

"These philanthropists take some strange notions."

"How now?"

"I met one once in a northwestern state. He hung around the legislature all one session and bribed the boys to vote against every crooked bill."

A HOT ONE.

Mr. Nagger—A woman's work is never done.

Mrs. Nagger—Especially when her work consists in trying to reform a man.

He Begins to See.

"When I first hit town," remarked Farmer Heck, "I uster stand on a corner and wonder how all these city people managed to live."

"Well?"

"Well, seeing as they have got $38 out of me in four days, it ain't such a mystery, after all."

Near-Greatness.

"Mrs. Shoddy told me there was something in the papers about her being at the De Styles' ball."

"I didn't see her name."

"No, but she was one of the 'many others.' "

Explained.

"No politicians are ever afraid of a thunderstorm."

"Why not politicians?"

"Because they are only too anxious for the lightning to strike."

Exceptions.

"Do you think a man ought to say, 'O, you chicken!' to a lady passing by?"

"Not unless he is in his green and salad days and wants to get into a stew."

HALLOWE'EN NOVELTY

A Jack O' Lantern hat of crepe paper is the latest novelty for wear by the young lady who will attend the Hallowe'en festivities. The hat is topped by an imitation Jack o' Lantern and a fan of the same material to match.

SHOULDER STRAP COMES BACK

Modistes Return to Style of a Few Years Ago, Which Has Much to Recommend It.

You remember the jumper dress that women liked a few years ago? It was virtually a skirt; a wide girdle and shoulder straps, and was worn over a blouse of washable fabric. Well, it is here again in a charming revival of style, having profited by its respite, according to the New York Press.

Modistes have launched a few models of the dress that has "braces" or suspenders, and it bids fair to be one of the features that spell practical beauty. From a comparatively small piece of material and a variety of separate chiffon, net or washable blouses, this new favorite will assure a change of dress at little expense.

Shoulder straps are seen on some of the advanced blouse models, showing that this idea has been seized by designers as a welcome change for the perennial favorite. These extensions are generally of the same material as the girdle and act as contrast over lace and tulle.

Buttons are used as trimming on these shoulder straps with great effect. They afford excellent background for continuing any decorative idea.

BLOUSE OF SPOT NET.

This is a charming little blouse arranged with a low neck and long sleeves with deep wrist ruffles.

Lace Door Panel.

Very frequently lace door panels shrink after washing them, making it impossible to use them again.

To prevent this follow these instructions: After removing the panel from the door thoroughly clean the glass.

Wash and starch the lace, slip in the rods immediately and replace the panel on the door.

Care should be observed to pull the lace straight, tacking down the sides, if necessary, to stretch the panel.

Allow it to dry upon the door.

This gives far better results than to launder the panel in the usual manner.

New Toilet Pins.

Buckle-shaped brooches now fasten the back of the stock collar and these are so wide that they almost fill the space at the nape of the neck and afford the support to the chiffon and net throat veiling at that point which the best of boning will not furnish.

NEW MATERIAL FOR NEGLIGEE

Madras Curtains Make Up Into the Very Finest Boudoir Garment That Can Be Devised.

If you are needing a new negligee don't seek for the material for it in the dress goods department of your favorite shop, but go to your house-furnishing merchant. He will have precisely what you need—a pair of extra curtains in madras—that he'll sell for a song. If they are of white or cream or black, large-figured in pale blue, light green or vivid cerise, so much the better for you. They'll make up into a stunning negligee of the sort that cut in two pieces, and slipping on over the head, buttons from throat, to shoulder tops and half way down the outer side of the kimono sleeves, with oriental beads of huge size and lurid tone enhanced with flecks of gold. About the throat and the edges of the sleeves place heavy cordings in silk matching the color of the figure on the madras, but use no further trimming. The material trims itself. A negligee in this design is unquestionably modest. It falls straight from the shoulders to the toes, does not cling to the figure and may be flung on in a second of time above a princess slip of taffeta or lawn.

Winter Hats.

Most picturesque and becoming are the new plush and velour hats for the autumn and early winter which are now being shown in the smart shops. The hats are in small, medium and large shapes, quite soft, so that they can be rolled and crushed to suit the face of the individual wearer. There are small hats with high round crowns, folded in around the top. Two-toned velour hats are among the newest models and there is an iridescent blue and black plush hat which is most striking and becoming to the average woman. A large sombrero of green velour with a facing of black velvet is trimmed with a black leather belt, dull leather with a gilt buckle. The shape is extremely smart. A rather high-crowned narrow brimmed hat of two-toned iridescent plush is in blue and black. The hat has a crown of shot silk and is trimmed with two made plumes of the plush. A small black plush hat, extremely dashing in effect, has a white satin band inside the brim and three fancy black feathers at one side.

Boots American Woman Is Wearing

With short walking skirts boots should play an important part. The average woman is seldom enthusiastic about shoes for a long time; probably she is too much concerned about the slimness or shapeliness of her ankle, which is apt to spread inelegantly unless it be strictly confined.

The boot of the moment is of black patent leather with white glace uppers, for which white suede may be substituted, and it is really very smart, although already it suffers from the misfortune of being imitated by the cheaper shops.

Big Muffs.

Muffs will be of more mammoth size than ever this winter. The furriers have seen to that all right. They are also desperately concerned in working up original little fitments for the neck, in the guise of high stocks.

WHO'S WHO—and Why

ESTRADA SAYS NICARAGUA PLUNDERED

"Zelaya's government plundered Nicaragua so shamelessly that in spite of its inexhaustible natural resources our country is bankrupt. Neither the state nor private citizens have at their command the capital necessary to develop Nicaragua. When I overthrew by the force of arms the Zelaya clique I hoped that peace would finally reign in my country. General Mena has shattered my hopes. I know now that we should no longer jeopard our future by a silly pride in our anarchistic independence. Some larger nation must help us out, and if the United States cannot do it, who can?"

According to Gen. Juan Estrada, former president of Nicaragua, such is the present situation. The general is now in this country and is living in Brooklyn at the Hotel St. George with his political associate, General Moncada.

The ex-president is a strikingly handsome, powerful and impressive man of forty-five, with large flashing eyes, an olive complexion and blue-black hair. His clear-cut sentences, his rare but forceful gestures, reveal the man of action. General Moncada, shorter in stature, gray-haired, softer in speech, gives an impression of polish, culture and statesmanlike ability.

"Revolutions," General Estrada said, "can no longer help us. I personally thought for a long while that petty tyrants could be done away with through popular revolt. I know better now."

WHEN ITALY'S KING AND QUEEN PLAY

During their past summer vacation, the king and queen of Italy were more in the public eye than ever, owing to the war. They are at present at their estate of San Rossore, near Pisa, whence they frequently go to visit hospitals to see wounded soldiers from Africa, to review troops, and take part in other functions on which the heart of the nation is now concentrated.

The royal yacht Yela is in constant demand, and the king and queen generally take their small family of four along, as they are all excellent sailors. Princess Yolanda, who is quite a photographer, has been devoting herself principally to sea views. The privacy with which the king always moves gives rise to many piquant incidents. For a ruler who goes about in his own kingdom as much as Victor Emanual III does, he is not known to many officials.

The Yela put in Spezia recently, and was boarded by the harbor-master. Princess Yolanda was about to take a snapshot of him, when he exclaimed: "It is against the rules; you cannot take photographs; you had better give me the machine." The princess, too young to stand on her dignity, burst into tears and gave up the camera, when the king appeared on deck. Even then the official did not know with whom he had to do, and was about to speak, when one of the officers came forward and said: "His majesty." The man, who was speechless with embarrassment, was relieved by a laugh from the queen, who proposed that he should give Princess Yolanda back her camera and that he should stand up and have his photograph taken. The princess later sent him a copy which did credit to her skill.

DECLARES WARS SOON BE ABOLISHED

In an address on "The Natural Forces in America Working Toward International Peace" before the International Peace Congress at Geneva, Switzerland, Mrs. Elmer Black, chairman of the propaganda committee of the American Peace and Arbitration league, declared that war as a means of settling differences between nations will soon be abolished. She said that there were certain invincible forces working toward this end, with little noise, but with irresistible power.

Using conditions in America as an example, she said in part:

"There are certain great natural forces working in America toward the final consummation of world peace. These natural forces are developing the processes of social and economic evolution through which we are working out our part in the world's destiny.

"First among these I place the remarkable awakening of our people to the general subject of conservation. We are unquestionably alive to the importance of conserving our material and human resources, and this is a condition opposed to war."

RENOUNCES WORLD FOR MISSION WORK

William H. Borden, young Chicago millionaire, was ordained a minister of the gospel the other night at Moody church. He has sacrificed all other ambitions to his desire to become a minister and devote his life to work in the Chinese missionary field.

Mr. Bordon is a graduate of Yale university and Princeton theological seminary. Although still a young man, he has devoted many years of his life and a great deal of his wealth to church work. He is a son of the late W. B. Borden and a brother of John Borden.

While Mr. Borden was attending Yale university he founded the Hope mission in New Haven, a rescue home for "down-and-outs," and denoated the building and equipment, at a personal cost of more than $20,000. Since his departure from the university the work in the mission is being carried on by other men in college.

Mr. Borden has long intended to gratify his lifelong desire to serve as a missionary in China. At the solicitation of the Student Missionary Volunteer association he will spend the winter visiting the colleges of the country and making addresses to the students on the subject of Christianity.

His tour of the colleges will begin in New York and will extend from coast to coast.

Against So Many Surgical Operations. How Mrs. Bethune and Mrs. Moore Escaped.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Murrayville, Ill.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a very bad case of female trouble and it made me a well woman. My health was all broken down, the doctors said I must have an operation, and I was ready to go to the hospital, but dreaded it so that I began taking your Compound. I got along so well that I gave up the doctors and was saved from the operation."—Mrs. CHARLES MOORE, R. R. No. 3, Murrayville, Ill.

Preserving Guano Deposits.

Four centuries ago the Incas of Peru, wise in their generation, protected and conserved the guano deposits of their empire. Since then 11,000,000 tons of guano have been removed and some of the deposits have been completely exhausted. Now Peru is imitating the wisdom of the Incas, and has adopted measures to conserve and perpetuate the supply of this invaluable fertilizing material.

Passing of the Lumberjack

LOGS IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN

EVERY frontier region has its peculiar characters. On the plains the cowboys; in the mining regions, the miners; and in the timber regions, the lumber jack. While the work of the lumber jack is not so spectacular as the "round up" and "broncho busting" of the cowboy, he is an interesting and picturesque character who is rapidly disappearing with the vanishing of our forests. In the time of his glory he is the fellow well met who has labored all winter in a lumber camp, saved a few hundred dollars, gone to the city in the spring and perhaps in less than 48 hours after landing is minus his roll of bills and has nothing to show for it except a headache and a very indistinct recollection how he came by that. With the lumber jack will go the lumber camp, the camp "cook," the "flunkey," the "boss" and other worthies.

From Michigan to the Pacific coast are found the lumber camps, employing at seasons of the year thousands of men. These lumber camps, small communities in themselves, have their unwritten laws and regulations, differing more or less in the several states.

A few years ago the writer with a crew of men was sent out early one fall to a lumber camp to cut basswood for a bedding firm. The cook with a few of the lumber jacks had remained in camp during the summer to load logs, but all the formal customs of the camp were preserved. We looked upon this excursion into the woods for the purpose of cutting wood as a sort of late summer vacation, and were accordingly in high spirits. When the horn blew for the first meal we rushed boisterously into the cook's shanty and seating ourselves at the table began to talk and joke. The lumber jacks looked at us with a sort of awe and then glanced at the cook.

Cook's Commands Obeyed.

"No talking at the table," the cook fiercely called out as he glared upon us. This command, so sudden and unusual, was strictly obeyed during the meal. At first we took it to be a rebuke for our noisy way of entering the cook shanty, but after the meal was over we were informed that talking at the table was a serious breach of the regulations and that we had better abide by the rule.

The privileged character in camp is the cook. Within his domain his authority is supreme. The saying that the way to reach a man's heart is through his stomach holds good in the lumber camp, and a cook can make or mar the efficiency of a crew of men by the quality of his cooking.

In Wisconsin and certain parts of Minnesota the lumber jacks enter the "cook shanty" at meal times with a sort of reverence. Next to the "boss' shanty," it is the holy of holies. When the door is reached all conversation ceases and the men silently file in and take their places. The head of the table is always reserved for the boss. Not a word is spoken at meal time, except when victuals are asked for. Meal time, instead of being a social hour as it is in society, is with the lumber jacks a time of silence, if not of meditation. The origin of this rule has been variously explained. The most plausible explanation is that the lumber jacks might inadvertently drop some remark reflecting upon the cooking, and thus insult the dignity of the cook.

In Washington, at least in some of the camps, no such rule exists. At meal time the men indulge in all kinds of railleries, not even excepting the cook.

Where They Sleep.

In all camps the meal hours are announced by blowing a horn, or, more generally, by striking a large triangle made especially for this purpose. At the signal the camp swarms with men rushing from the bunk houses to the cook shanty.

The lumber jacks sleep in bunk houses. During the evening they sit along their bunks smoking and conversing. Sometimes a boxing or wrestling match is arranged. By nine o'clock all lights are out and the man who has the temerity to keep his light burning after that hour will be lucky if some boots or socks do not find their way in his direction.

The bunk houses are sometimes models of cleanliness, but the lumber jack is like average humanity and if no external influence is brought to bear upon him he does not make much of an effort to keep himself clean. Unless the management makes rules or the flunkey carefully attends to his duties in keeping things clean, the bunk houses are apt to become filthy.

Sunday is wash day, and if a stream or river is at hand the lumber jacks can be seen lined up along the bank "boiling up." In this operation they violate the rules of the house wife when she does her laundry. Instead of rubbing the clothes and trying to free them from dirt first they boil them at once. The result is that though the clothes may be clean, they certainly do not look it. Boiling the clothes has at least one good effect. It annihilates any vermin that may be in them.

When spring comes and the snow disappears the camp breaks up. Woe to the town that in the early days was located near a lumber camp. The lumber jacks released from all restraint, swooped down upon the town and it was a wild time for a while. With the advent of civilization and law and order these raids of the lumber jack have become a thing of the past. Time has had its mollifying influence upon the lumber jack, seasoning him and making him more law abiding, but he is still to a great extent the free, shiftless being who, when he comes to the city, is the victim of the saloon keeper and the crook.

TRACED TO RACING STABLES

Slang Phrase, "Getting His Goat," So Popular Now, Had Origin in Actual Occurrence.

Unlike many other vivid or picturesque slang expressions, which enrich and enliven the English language, but the source of which is either obscure or totally unknown, the origin of the phrase, "to get his goat," can fortunately be traced. Until it came into popular use, about half a dozen years ago, the phrase was confined to racing stables and to running horses and was part of the language of the racetrack.

It was formerly the rather widespread custom among owners of racing stock to keep a goat in the same stall with a horse, either from the superstitious belief in mascots or from the more scientific belief that the goat imparted some of his strength or magnetism to the horse. Ardent friendships have been known to spring up between goats and horses living thus in close intimacy and sleeping together.

When a horse that had the companionship of a goat chanced to win the jockeys would attribute his success to the influence of the goat, and it happened more than once that a stable boy would "get the goat" of the winning horse by entering the stable surreptitiously at night and taking the animal to the stall of his own favorite. If the horse that was deprived of his goat friend should lose the next day and the other horse should win, that would, of course, strengthen the belief in the efficacy of the goat.

The practice of relying on goats to help a horse win a race is said to be dying out, but it has left behind one of the most expressive phrases, which seems destined ultimately to become as respectable as any English idiom.

HUNG HIGH BY ONE HAND

Ferris Wheel Car Overturns and Girl Saves Self by Grasping a Stanchion.

New York.—Zelma Helklia told the other day how it felt to hang by one hand to the stanchion of a revolving Ferris wheel 65 feet above the ground. This experience was her's the night before and her friend, Mrs. Anna Wori, suffered the more serious attack of falling to the ground when the car in which the two were riding at a carnival in New Rochelle overturned.

"We got in one of the cars," said Miss Helklia, "and the wheel began to lift us. I was sitting on the right side of the single seat and Anna on the left. Suddenly, just as we reached the top of the swing, our car turned over without warning.

"Instinctively I spread out my hands. The fingers of my left hand closed around an upright stanchion and there I hung in space. I did not see Anna fall, but I heard the noise of her body striking the ground.

"The wheel continued to turn and another basket came up, directly below me. I let myself drop into it and then I fainted. When I recovered consciousness I expected to see Anna dead, but they told me that she was living and had been taken to a hospital."

The doctors at the hospital said that though she had a fractured skull, Mrs. Wori would probably recover.

To Remove Paint From Linoleum.

To remove the spots of white paint from linoleum, keep them saturated with turpentine until they soften, or if they are very old and hard, use equal parts of turpentine and ammonia. They will soon soften and easily rub off, then wash with warm water and use a little soap, then rinse and wipe dry.

JAIL TERM REDUCED

COUNT RONIKIER OF WARSAW HAS SENTENCE CUT DOWN.

Fashionably Dressed Women In Court Gush Over Noble Guilty of Killing His Boy Brother-in-Law—Also Load Him With Flowers.

Warsaw.—Count Ronikier, who is charged with the murder of his boy brother-in-law, will be freed at the end of next year, his original sentence being commuted to one and one-half years' imprisonment without hard labor. His trial, the most sensational since that of his cousin, Countess Tarnowska, in Venice, some time ago, lasted for 100 days.

In the first instance he was sentenced to fifteen years hard labor.

On his appeal, which occupied the time of the court for two days, though the judges affirmed his guilt, they gave him the shortest possible term, because all the experts disagreed.

The court was daily crowded with fashionably dressed women who loaded him with flowers, and went into spasms when he chanced to forget to acknowledge a posy by blowing kisses. Troops of soldiers had to keep the streets clear when judgment was expected; counsel fought duels with witnesses, and one barrister attacked Ronikier so bitterly that he appealed to the judges for protection.

He is to be released on bail for $1,500 until his petition goes to the czar. His wife, who long refused to believe him guilty, says she will file papers for a divorce the moment he leaves prison, because he had shown himself to have been a faithless husband.

Her father, who is a millionaire, is now getting rid of his fortune as fast as he can, to keep Ronikier from inheriting any of it. He fainted in court on hearing that the sentence was so light.

When Ronikier returned to his cell after the verdict he found more than 100 letters from women ready to marry him when he is free.

Feathered Citizens of London.

Besides the sparrows and the pigeons which inhabit the atmosphere of London, there is a great nest of crows in Grays Inn, the last survivor of numerous rookeries which used to exist in the old buildings of the city. A single pair of carrion crows also have their nest near St. Pancras church, around which they are often seen flying and teaching their young ones how to stretch their wings.

RAT WEARS WEDDING RING

Rodent Killed Carries Gold Band Lost by Woman Years Ago—Bears Date of 1890.

Bloomington, Ill.—Wallace Fauber, a farmer of Woodford county, was pitching hay when a rat ran out of the stack. He transfixed it with the tines of the fork.

He was struck by the peculiar shape of the rat. It was deformed about the neck and shoulders, giving it the appearance of a kangaroo in miniature. Inspection revealed a ring around its neck, and when removed the inscription, "F. S. to M. S., Sept. 26, 1890," was visible.

The theory is that a former tenant on the farm, Mrs. Frank Swaider, lost the ring, and that the rat when small had inserted its head through the ring and was unable to dislodge it.

If this is the case the rat wore the ring for sixteen years. An effort is being made to locate Mrs. Swaider.

RICHEST MAN IN THE WORLD.

Minneapolis Journal: Many men ruin their enjoyment of the present by striving too hard to provide for the future.

George Saint-Amon, a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, tells of having met recently a man of remarkable character, in fact, one of the most remarkable men in the world. He was a man who, although he had not very much money, was sensible of the fact that, no matter how much it was, it was "enough."

Few people in this world ever come to feel that they have "enough". Whether a man has ten dollars or ten hundred thousand dollars, if he once comes to the conclusion that it is "enough," he is rich. The hero of the present story stated it in these words:

"I am the richest man in the world. I have been taking in enough money to supply my needs and those of my family. The firm that employs me has informed me that, beginning with 1913, I am to receive an increase in wages. I am glad to get it but I have enough."

This man owns his house and in addition a small farm. He is fifty-five years old, but he has been careful of his mental and physical health and has the muscles and brain of a man of thirty. He likes a horse and enjoys an automobile, though he does not own either. He is deeply interested in world politics and studies the philosophers in a layman's way. He realizes that a man working with pick and shovel may have a better mind than a college professor and is quite likely to be as honest. He does not criticize young folks for making a noise, for he appreciates that they are healthy young animals of exuberant spirits. Asked about work, he says:

"I like to work, and I have kept myself in trim to work. I know that I am more capable than I was twenty years ago, and, even if I lose my present job, I can still earn a living for my family, if not in the city then on my farm. I have enough and I am satisfied. In fact, I feel that I am the richest man in the world."

And he undoubtedly is. A man who sinks his present in his future finds that the future, when it becomes present, is equally as blind and as unsatisfactory as the past. And so on, until he changes his mind.

For, after all, it is largely a state of mind. And the man who has achieved satisfaction has obtained what the man who is ruining his present for his future is after, but has not attained—and is not likely to attain.

Would it not be a sensible proceeding for all of us who are neglecting the satisfactions that are really ours today in trying to secure a future that we are not sure of, would it not be a reasonable thing to sit down and take count of stock and see if we might not be a great deal better off than we are by simply changing our attitude a little?

Some of these richest men in the world are walking our streets—and they don't know it. Count your blessings!

The action of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and associated companies, of which the Pacifc Telephone & Telegraph Co., the Western Union Telegraph Co., and the Western Electric Co. are a part, in providing a permanent fund of $10,000,000 to be used for the benefit of employees, for superannuation, sickness, accident and death, is very commendable, and in harmony with the policy being adopted by many large companies and business houses to aid their working force. Employers of labor are finding that it is materially to their advantage to care for the health of their employees and encourage long terms of service. Life takes on a more rosy hue to an employee of a concern that treats him or her humanely, and they endeavor to repay such treatment with better service.

The editorial in Monday's San Jose Mercury by William Rader on "Jack Johnson's Conviction," certainly voices the sentiments of a great many people in this country. That thousands have admired a character of his stamp is a blot upon the nation. As Mr. Rader says, "If we are going to worship an athletic hero, let us select a proper model and not the kind of the character of Jack Johnson, whose chief distinction is that he 'knocked out Jim Jeffries."

WE are glad to see that several of the papers on the coast have taken up the campaign against the disfiguring billboards that are so numerous everywhere. The West is behind the East in this matter and if this section of the country is to make the most impression on eastern tourists, these blots on the landscape and defacements of city and village property should all be obliterated before 1915.

WHEN progressive North Dakota gives 10,000 plurality to progressive LaFollette in March and 10,000 plurality in a four cornered fight to progressive Wilson in November and the country in general does likewise it means that progressives are in earnest.—Williston (N. D.) Herald.

United States Geological Survey Issues Report Containing Valuable Data on Principal Streams of California.

The material progress of California has in large part been measured by its water-supply development. In the days of '49 its first great boom was the result of finding gold in a creek bottom, and throughout the early gold days the rapid growth of California was made possible by the development of water supplies for use in placer mining. In later years came the great irrigation activities, and especially in southern California have the agricultural products become so valuable that in that part of the State water is probably worth more than it is anywhere else in the country.

Throughout the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys water has the same relatively large values for irrigation. Still later came the recognition of the enormous importance of California water powers. In a very few years the development of water power has grown until California ranks second only to New York, the total installed horsepower in the State in the year 1911 being over 500,000.

Importance of the Study of Stream Flow

It is apparent that in a State so thoroughly dependent upon its water supplies investigations which will reveal the amount of water available in the streams and beneath the ground are of the highest importance. The people of California have recognized this and for many years have through their legislature cooperated with the United States Geological Survey in the determination of stream flow and the location of underground supplies.

Records Are Available to the Public.

The Geological Survey has just issued Water-Supply Paper 291, on the surface water supply of the Pacific coast in California, 1910, by W. B. Clapp, F. F. Henshaw, and H. D. McGlashan. This report contains the results of measurements of some of the California rivers, made during the year 1910, at regular stations maintained by the Survey in cooperation with the office of the State engineer. All the important rivers of the State were covered in this investigation, and in addition many of the smaller tributaries and irrigation canals. There are in all 98 stations for which data are reported in this publication, and work has been carried on in a way that affords for almost every stream reported a daily record of the discharge. A copy of the report can be procured free of cost on application to the Director of the United States Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

Safety Committee Has Met

In line with the policy which is being extensively adopted on steam railroads, the Peninsular Railway and San Jose Railroads have organized a joint Safety Committee, which holds monthly meetings for the purpose of considering the cause of accidents and devising ways and means for prevention. This committee is composed of officials and platform employees, and is eminently practical. Accidents which have actually occurred are considered from all points of view, and if any way is shown by which similar accidents can be avoided for the future, the necessary changes in equipment or instructions to the men are arranged for.

At a meeting of the committee held a few days since, the large number of collisions with autos was especially noted. The damage resulting in most of these cases was comparatively slight, but in nearly every instance severe personal injury and possible loss of life, were only prevented by prompt action on the part of the motorman. It appeared from reports of many trustworthy witnesses that a large number of persons now operating autos are either not fully competent or are reckless in extreme; in fact the committee felt it necessary to issue a warning to all motormen to take especial care in connection with autos, as in so many instances the operators were unfamiliar with traffic regulations or the management of their machine.

Numerous accidents recently occurring with autos, entirely aside from electric cars, go to show where the responsibility rests. The situation would really seem to call for some action on the part of automobile associations towards improving the knowledge or methods of auto drivers, and thus avoiding a demand for some legislative enactment. Undoubtedly the auto, which is left free to take its own course on the public highway, is of much more danger to pedestrians than the electric car, which moves only along a restricted track; yet motormen are very carefully instructed with a view to avoiding accidents, while autos may be operated by anyone who chooses, regardless of his qualifications.

"Professional chaffeurs are all right," said a member of the Safety Committee; "none of our collisions have been with autos operated by a professional. There is no reason to complain of the auto on its own account; when properly operated it is not a source of danger; but our Committee feels very strongly the danger arising from autos operated by those not fully qualified. Of course we look at the matter from the standpoint of our railway operation; but people generally are getting aroused on this subject. It might be worth while for those interested in the auto business in various ways to take some concerted action to prevent irresponsible operators from provoking prejudice against auto-drivers as a class; one fool-hardy or uninstructed operator goes far to bring the whole business into disrepute. And by the way," he added; "speaking of autos, don't forget those motorcycles! Of all the reckless,—" but the rest was evidently not intended for publication.

The Sequence.

It was a Kingston (Ont.) woman who recently sized up one feature of the servant girl question in a new way. She said, "I got a girl to relieve me of physical fatigue, and soon I got rid of her to relieve me of mental fatigue."

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY OF SANTA CLARA, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Order to Show Cause Why Order of Sale of Real Estate Should not be Made

In the matter of the estate of Edward Hiatt, deceased.

It appearing to the undersigned, Judge of said Court, by the petition this day presented and filed by Elwood Hiatt, the administrator of the estate of Edward Hiatt, deceased, praying for an order of sale of real estate, that it is necessary to sell the whole of real estate, to pay the expenses and charges of administration of said estate,

It is therefore ordered by the undersigned, Judge of said Court, that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased, appear before the said Superior Court on Friday, the 29th day of November, A. D., 1912 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the Court-room of said Superior Court, at the Court House in San Jose, County of Santa Clara to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said administrator to sell so much of the real estate of the said deceased as shall be necessary.

And that a copy of this order shall be published at least four successive weeks in The Campbell Interurban Press, a newspaper printed and published in said County,

P. F. GOSBEY, Judge.
